

Abstract of Disclosure

A method and apparatus employing an axially elongated ground piercing tool for forming an in-ground tunnel under a surface structure with forward axial movement of the tool in the ground under the structure and a pipe connector releasably connected to the tool and to a pipe after formation of the in-ground tunnel whereby the pipe is pulled through the in-ground tunnel with rearward removal of the tool and pipe connector from the tunnel.